Narrador: a

Entrevistadora: Excuse me. I work for a travel agency and I'm conducting a survey to find out why people travel. Would you help with the survey?

Homem: Yes, sure.

Entrevistadora: Alright. So, could you tell me where you're going?

Homem: Lisbon, Portugal.

Entrevistadora: Awesome. And what's the purpose of your travel?

Homem: I have family in Lisbon. It's been one year since I last saw them.

Entrevistadora: You must be looking forward to seeing them. Thank you for your time and safe travels.

Homem: Thanks.

Narrador: b

Entrevistadora: Excuse me. Would you spare one minute to talk to me?

Mulher: Hmm, let me check the time. We still have one hour before our flight departs.

Entrevistadora: We? Who else is traveling with you?

Mulher: My husband and son. They are at the gift shop now.

Entrevistadora: Oh, I see. And where are you guys going?

Mulher: Australia. It's our first family trip.

Entrevistadora: That sounds awesome. And what is the purpose of your travel?

Mulher: Pleasure, I'd say. We're on vacation.

Entrevistadora: Well, thanks for the interview and have a great time.

Mulher: No problem.

Narrador: c

Entrevistadora: Excuse me. Excuse me! Are you in a hurry?

Homem: Kind of.

Entrevistadora: I was wondering if you could....

<She is interrupted...>

Homem: Oh, no. My flight has been delayed.

Entrevistadora: Oh, that's great. I mean, now

Homem: How could I help you?

Entrevistadora: Well, I work for this travel agency, and we're trying to find out why people travel. Would you answer a couple of questions?

Homem: As many as you wish.

Entrevistadora: Oh, thanks. So, to start with, I'd like to know where you're going.

Homem: I'm going to Beijing, China.

Entrevistadora: And would you mind telling me what the purpose of your travel is?

Homem: Oh, I work for a company that does business with China.

Entrevistadora: Sounds like a great job.

Homem: Yeah, I can't complain.

Entrevistadora: Well, I don't wish to keep you any longer. Thank you so much for your time and good luck.

Homem: You're welcome and thanks.

Narrador: d

Entrevistadora: Excuse me, ma'am.

Mulher: Oh, hello.

Entrevistadora: I'm doing a survey about why people travel. Would you be interested in participating?

Mulher: Of course.

Entrevistadora: Awesome. I couldn't help but notice that you have a lot of luggage. Are you going or coming back?

Mulher: Oh, I'm going to Europe for two weeks.

Entrevistadora: That sounds great. Is it your first time?

Mulher: No, I've lost count of how many times I've been to Europe.

Entrevistadora: Oh, I see. And what's the purpose of your travel?

Mulher: I go shopping in Europe at least twice a year. I work with fashion and I like to be up-to-date with the latest trends.

Mulher: Thanks.

Entrevistadora: Thank you for talking to me. I appreciate it and have fun shopping in Europe.

Mulher: Thank you, darling.

Script – Track 15

The most exciting trip I've ever taken was to Brasília back in 2012. I'm American and I've always been fascinated by Brazilian culture. I've been teaching Portuguese to Americans for 15 years. So, because of my efforts to spread the language and culture of Brazil, UNB (Universidade de Brasília) invited me to an event where they would honor me. I accepted the invitation right away and, on August 10th, I made my way to Detroit airport. All of the accommodations had been made by the event organizers. I just had to apply for a visa, which was pretty easy to get. After checking in at one of the airport kiosks, I learned that our flight was overbooked. That had never happened to me before. Luckily, there were a couple of no-shows, so I didn't have to take a later flight. Apart from that little mishap, everything went just fine. No cancellations, no delays, and the service at the airport was great. Also, the take-off and the landing were pretty smooth, as smooth as they could have ever been. At 7 a.m. on the dot, I was in Brazil. I was greeted by Professor Milton Braga. I picked up my luggage at the baggage claim and we headed for the hotel. The stay and the visit overall were very comfortable. They treated me like a king. Every day they would take me out to lunch and dinner. Amazing food, by the way. And the city? Well, let me just say it lives up to its status as a world heritage site. Its architecture and urban planning are fantastic. As for the event itself, it was surely the highlight of my trip. I talked about my job back in the USA and they rewarded me with a silver plaque thanking me for my work. It was quite emotional. It's hard to believe that I was there for two weeks, the whole thing went by so fast. They wanted me to stay longer and see more of the country, but I had to take a rain check. I can't wait to go back, though. I know there is so much more left to be seen in Brazil.
